About Ingredients in your Dogs Food

PROTEIN

As one of the most important nutrients in your dog's diet, protein in dog food helps support your dog's muscles, skin, immune system, hair, and more.

FATS

Active dogs need fat to fuel their muscles and make the energy they require for movement. Dogs fed a high-fat food have more capacity to burn fatty acids and a greater capacity to perform at a high level.

FIBRE

The primary function and benefit of fibre is to increase bulk and water in intestinal contents, maintain optimum levels of good bacteria and promote gut health.

PHOSPHORUS

Phosphorus is an essential mineral that dogs need for healthy bones, teeth, and metabolism, phosphorus is often combined with calcium.

CRUDE ASH

Ash is the residue from heated organic products including proteins, fats and carbohydrates. By heating these products, it isolates minerals which can be used To support normal physiological function.

LINOLEIC ACID

Linoleic acid is an omega-6 polyunsaturated fatty acid that is considered the most important essential fatty acid for dogs. Omega-6 plays a role in your dog's skin health.
